Figures are based on fees for the 2022–2023 academic year (September to August) and are subject to change. Totals include incidental fees and your U-Pass. Full-time graduate students are usually enrolled for three terms per academic year. To consult official university fees, visit our website.
Before you apply, be sure that you meet the program requirements for graduate studies, including the language requirements. Among other requirements, master’s applicants must hold at least an honours bachelor’s (or equivalent) in a field related to the program for which they are applying and the minimum required admission average for that program. PhD applicants must hold a master’s and at least the minimum required admission average for the program. To find out what degree equivalents you require for your program of interest, go to uOttawa.ca/graduate-studies/international/admission-equivalencies.

Then, read about the application steps information which can be found on the Graduate Office webpage of each faculty.

When you’re ready to apply, submit your application through ouac.on.ca, which is used by all universities in the province of Ontario, Canada.

It may take several weeks to review your file, and not all admission decisions are issued at the same time. The timing to receive a reply will vary, depending on the program you applied for and whether your application is complete, with the documents required for evaluation. Admission to graduate programs is competitive and not guaranteed even if you meet all the criteria.

Students admitted to a thesis-based program are supervised by a professor to guide their research and writing. Some programs require that you find a supervisor before submitting your admission application. If required:

STEP 1
Find the profiles of professors authorized to supervise who do research at the University of Ottawa and more at uOttawa.ca/en/faculties.

STEP 2
Read their profiles to learn about their research and theoretical approaches.

STEP 3
Make the first move: Email a professor to introduce yourself, and discuss your research. Make a good impression by writing in a formal tone. Include information about yourself, such as your areas of interest and their similarity to those of the professor.

STEP 4
Set up a virtual meeting with the potential supervisor to show your interest. Ahead of the meeting, send your updated CV, gather notes on your possible research proposal, and prepare a list of concise questions.

Professors are not obligated to take on students if they feel it is not a suitable collaboration or if there is insufficient funding.

Indigenous affirmation

We pay respect to the Algonquin people, who are the traditional guardians of this land. We acknowledge their longstanding relationship with this territory, which remains unceded. We pay respect to all Indigenous people in this region, from all nations across Canada, who call Ottawa home. We acknowledge the traditional knowledge keepers, both young and old. And we honour their courageous leaders, past, present and future.
